

Financial Activities

The Dallas-Fort Worth region is a key U.S. financial center. Nothing better exemplifies this claim than recent announcements about new and relocating stock exchanges.

The newly formed Texas Stock Exchange will be a fully electronic national securities exchange that will launch trading in 2026. Nasdaq established a Texas office in Irving in 2024. And NYSE Chicago will reincorporate in Texas in 2025 with its offices to be located in the Dallas region.

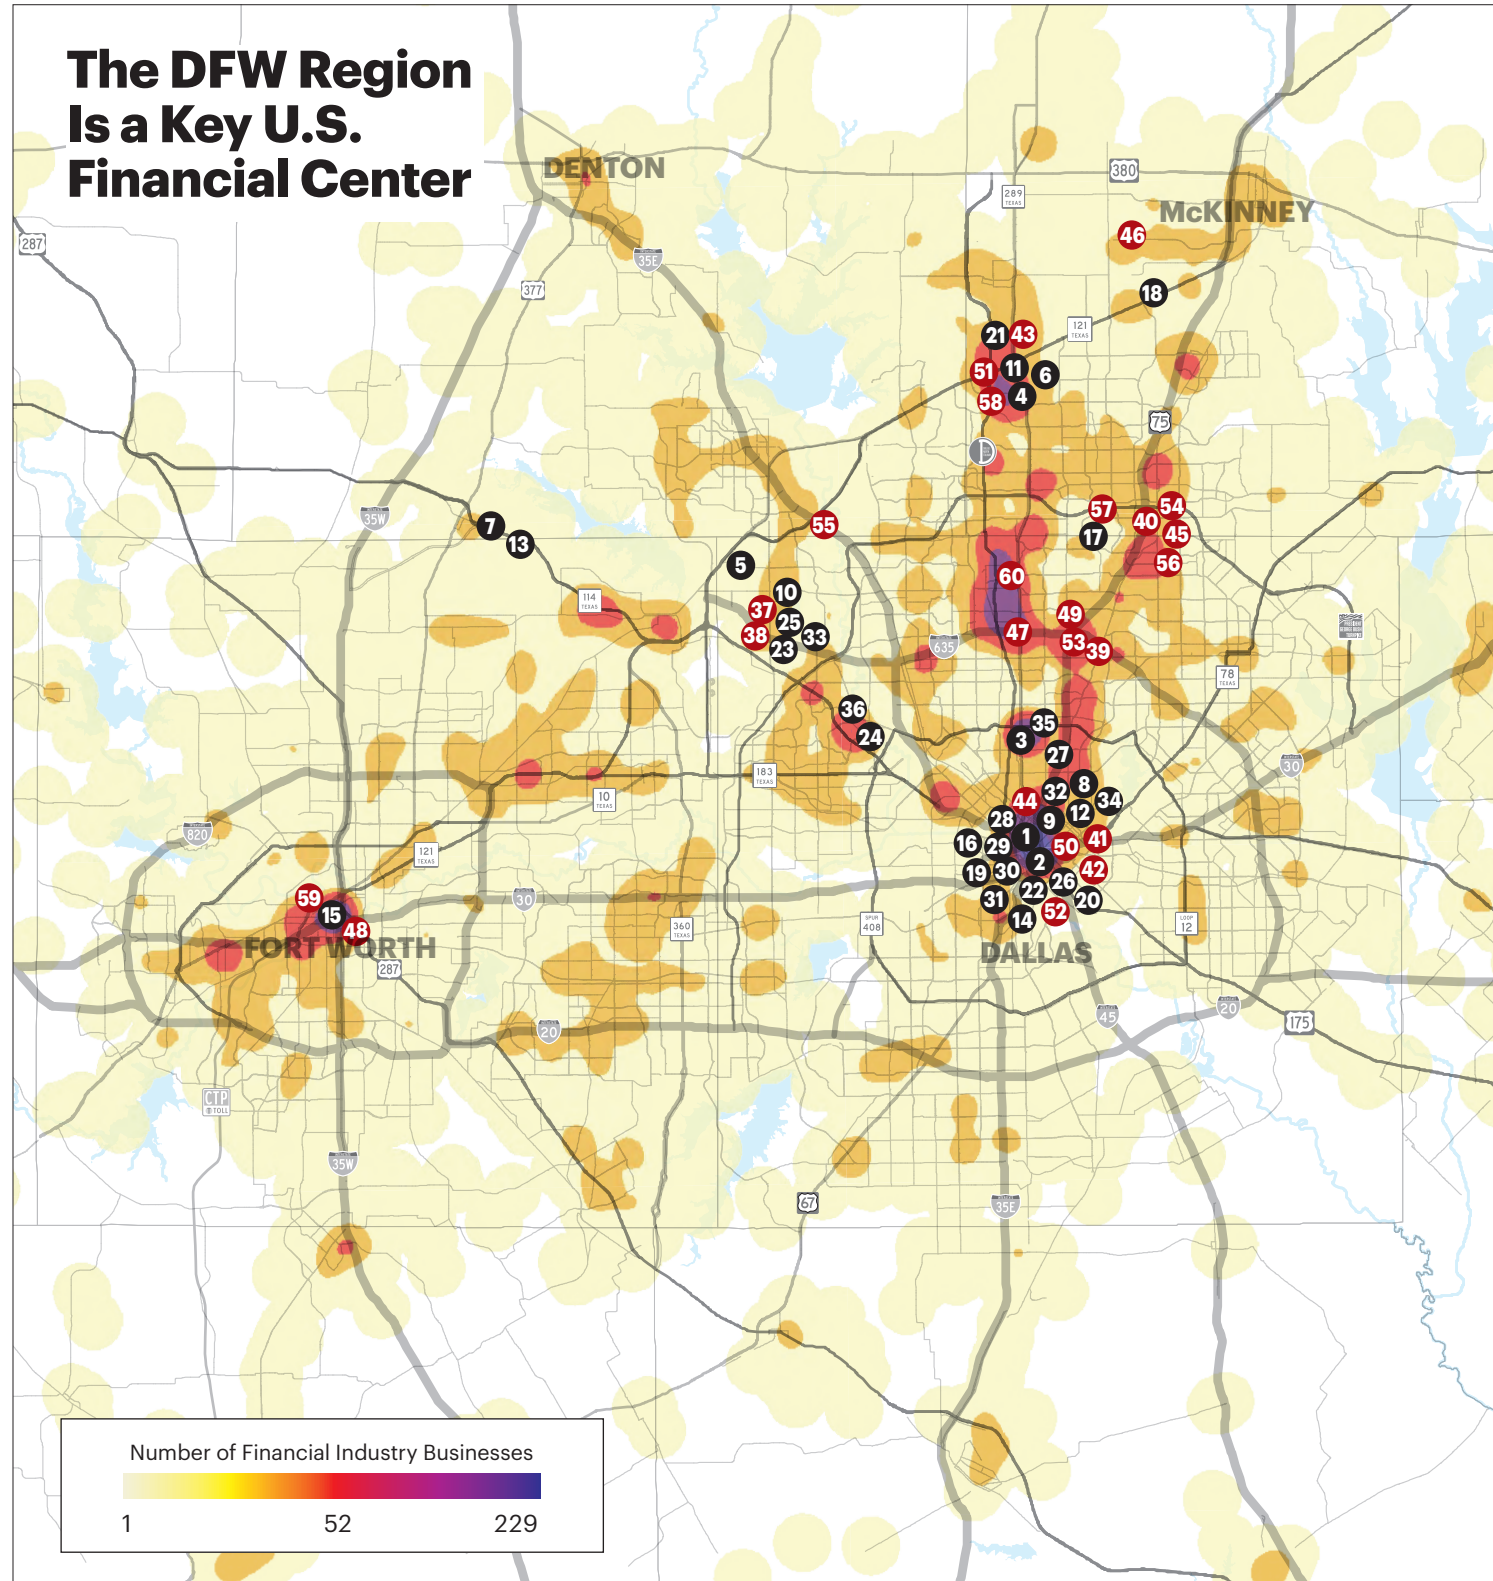

DFW is already home to Comerica's corporate headquarters. JPMorgan Chase, Citigroup, Charles Schwab, and Fidelity are among the top employers in the region. Capital One operates an innovation center that is helping to drive advances in fintech. And three signature corporate office buildings are under construction—for Goldman Sachs and Bank of America in downtown Dallas, and for Wells Fargo in Las Colinas.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas serves the 11th Federal Reserve District and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation operates a regional office here.

Financial and insurance firms are located throughout the DFW region, with the largest concentration centered in downtown Dallas and its northern suburbs of Addison, Irving, and Plano. Downtown Fort Worth also has many financial companies.

When it comes to insurance, the Dallas-Fort Worth area is home to national or regional headquarters for most major providers, including State Farm and Liberty Mutual.
