

Demographics

Demographics in the Dallas-Fort Worth region continue to evolve. For the first time, 20 percent of the population is foreign-born, with Hispanics accounting for the largest minority group in the region and state. Additionally, the region's workforce is well-educated with a mix of recent graduates and workforce veterans. Two-thirds of workers 25 years of age and older have at least some college education, with nearly 40 percent holding a bachelor's degree or other advanced degree.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth area, more than 1,700,000 residents were added since the 2010 census.

12,200,000 or more will live in DFW by 2050.

418 people per day were added to the Dallas-Fort Worth region in 2023.

Total Population:
8,100,037
