

Public Transit

Dallas Area Rapid Transit (DART), which includes light rail, heavy rail, streetcar, and bus service, features the nation's longest light-rail network enabling easy access to key job centers in Dallas and its suburbs.

DART provides convenient light-rail access to DFW International Airport, as well as the Silver Line heavy rail that also connects to the Trinity Metro TEXRail Commuter train travelling to downtown Fort Worth.

Fort Worth residents are served by Trinity Metro bus and rail, both of which connect to the Trinity River Express (TRE), an intercity commuter train that transports passengers between downtown Dallas and Fort Worth with many stations in between.

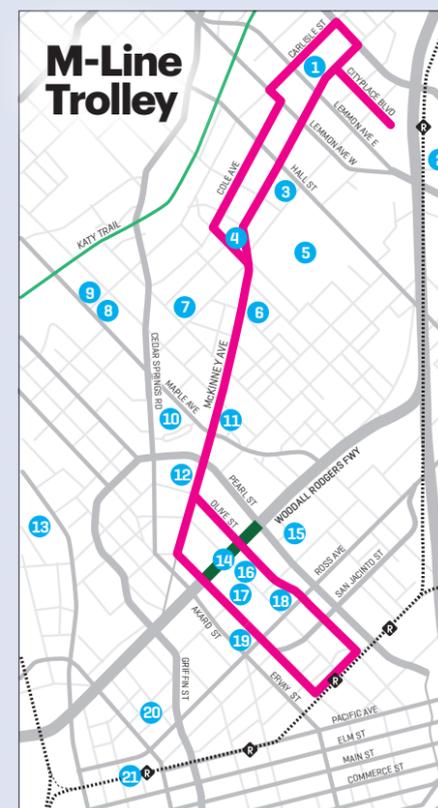

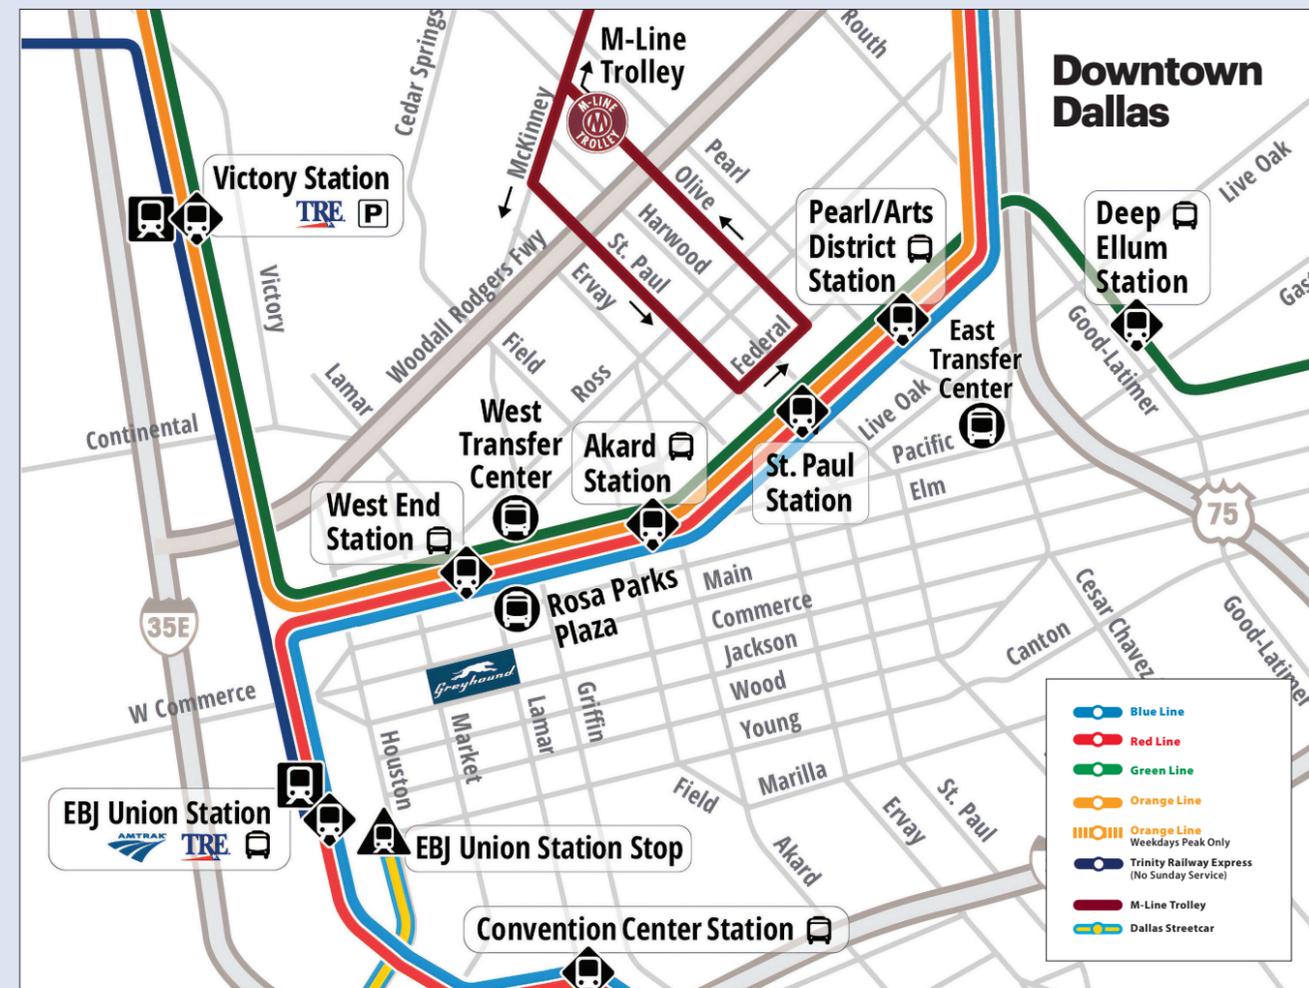

The Denton County Transportation Authority (DCTA) operates the A-Train, which connects DART riders in Carrollton to five stations ending in Denton.
