

Financial Activities

The Dallas-Fort Worth region is a key U.S. financial center. Nothing better exemplifies this claim than recent announcements about new and relocating stock exchanges.

With a Dallas headquarters, the newly formed Texas Stock Exchange is a fully electronic national securities exchange that will launch trading in 2026. Nasdaq established a Texas office in Irving in 2024. And NYSE Chicago reincorporated in Texas in 2025 with its offices located in Dallas.

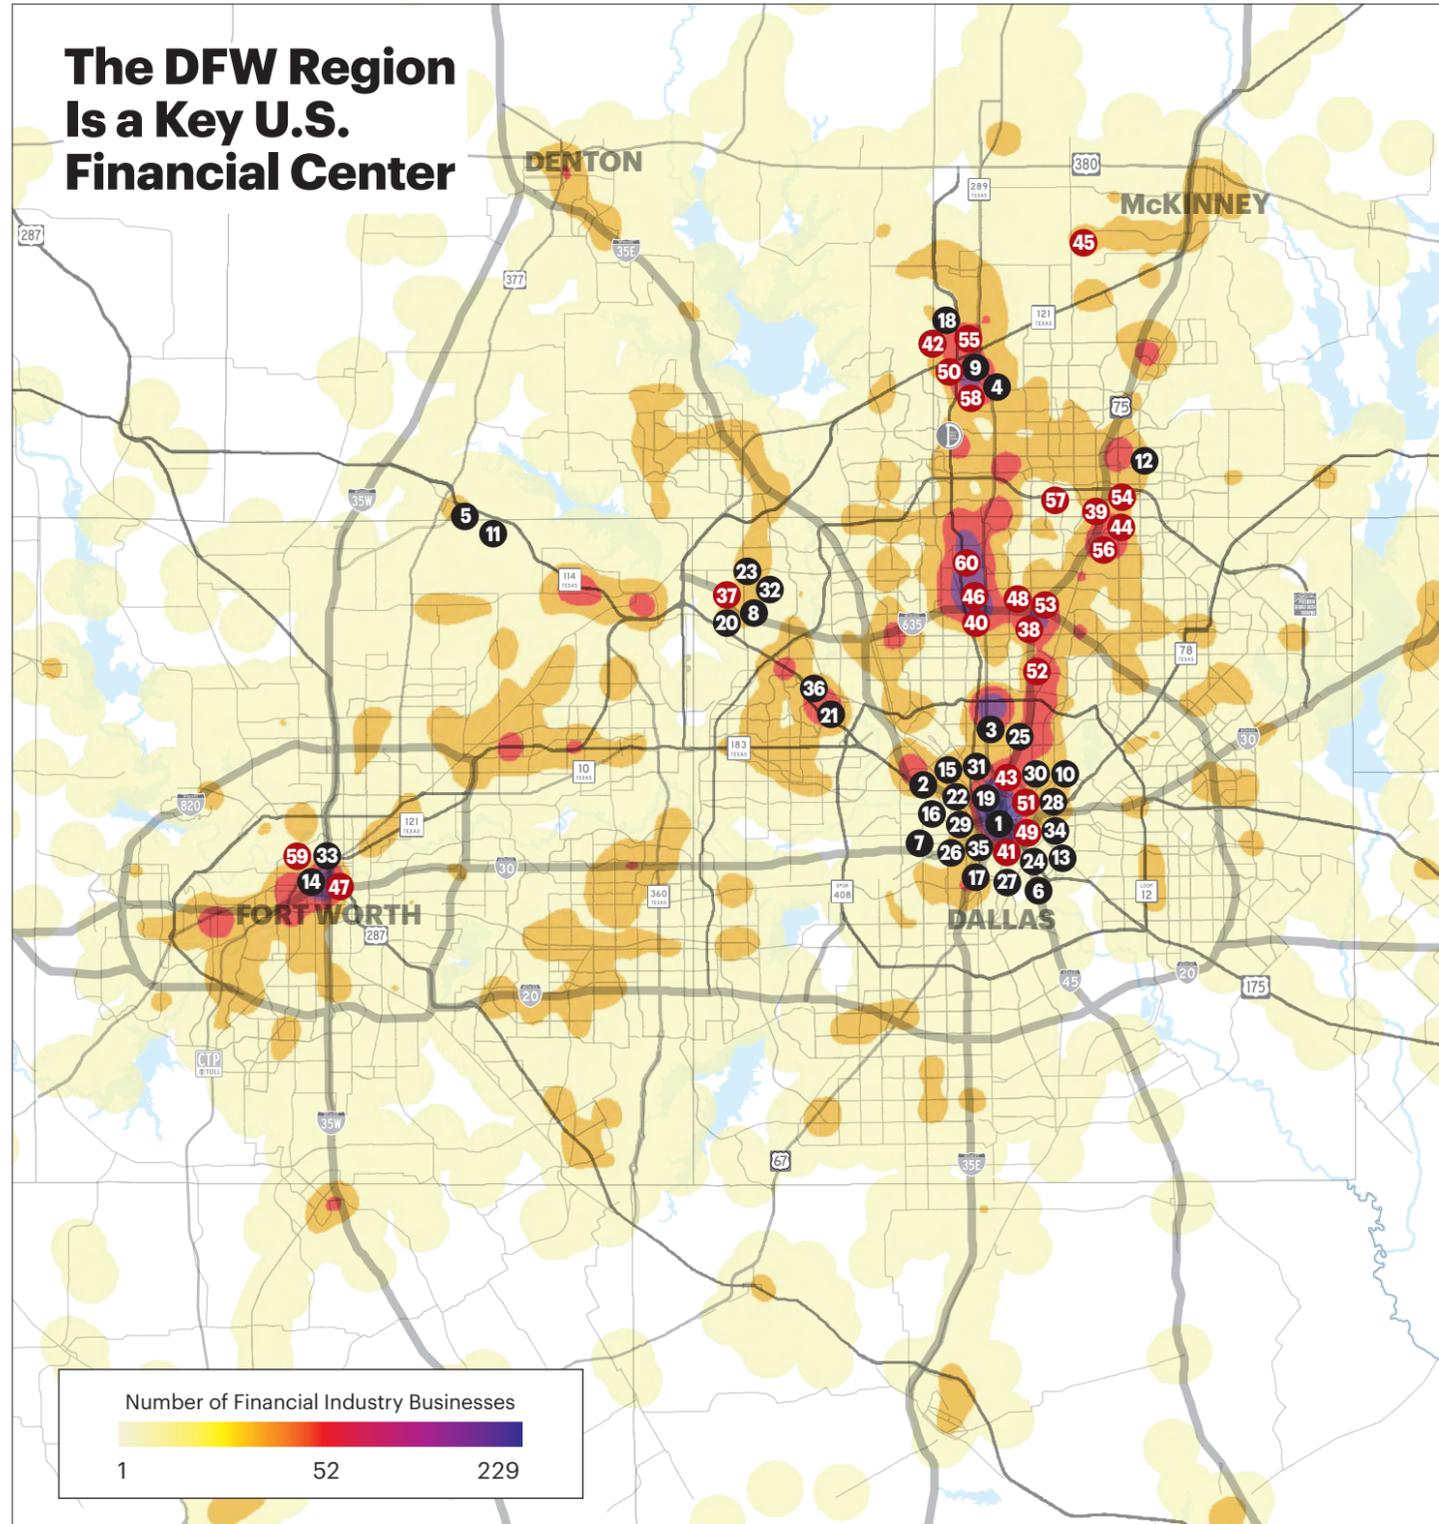

DFW is a major hub or home base for JPMorgan Chase, Citigroup, Charles Schwab, Fidelity, and soon-to-be Fifth Third Bank after a successful acquisition of Comerica Bank. These banks are among the top employers in the region.

Capital One operates an innovation center that is helping to drive advances in fintech. And three signature corporate office buildings are under construction or were recently completed for Goldman Sachs and Bank of America in downtown Dallas, and for Wells Fargo in Las Colinas.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas serves the 11th Federal Reserve District, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation operates a regional office here.

When it comes to insurance, the Dallas-Fort Worth area is home to national or regional headquarters for most major providers, including State Farm and Liberty Mutual.
